Conference Add-Ons includes:

Roll Call – a conference manager will verify each participant's presence in the conference and perform a final check on the sound quality of the call. This service is available for audioPlus services only.

Communications Line – enables the conference manager to speak privately with the arranger during the call to provide updates as specified by the host. Examples of such updates would be the status of call participants, who is in queue and what polling trends may be.

Broadcast Mode (Listen Only) – used in presentations when the participants are to listen to important information that is being disseminated. A single line or a group of lines may be placed into the broadcast mode.

Polling – enables the host to ask a series of questions to the participants. The host may pose questions with up to nine possible responses.

Queuing - allows conference participants to "line up" to ask a question using their touch-tone phones. Conference participants are individually placed in queue and announced to the chairperson by the operator for Q&A sessions.
